

RADY SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT

BUSINESS IS A SCIENCE

At UC San Diego Rady School of Management, business is a science.

With a nationally recognized faculty integrated into one of the most productive research universities in the world, we know breakthrough ideas happen when people collaborate on problems and adventure freely from their disciplinary lanes. Our entrepreneurial ethos is a point of pride, earning us consistent recognition as among the best business schools for startup founders. And we know that what we discover, we must apply. Rady partners with companies on projects for three-way benefit — faculty develop real-world insights for publication, firms flourish and society prospers. Win-win-win.

Rady's commitment to rigorous exploration animates student experiences inside the classroom and across a spectrum of hands-on activities. For example, the Triton Innovation Challenge connects Rady with Scripps Institution of Oceanography and Jacobs School of Engineering in a high-energy pitch competition aimed at ramping up climate and sustainability solutions. Quantitative skills link with ingenuity as hallmarks of a Rady education. We provide the business leaders of tomorrow with the in-demand analytical and leadership skills needed to deliver impact.

And where better than San Diego to excel? Our region boasts the third-largest life sciences market and is sixth for regional investment in tech — seeding our economy with Rady graduates promises a future of abundance and impact worthy of the boldest imaginations. As Rady conducts meaningful research and educates the next generation of principled, innovative leaders, we invite you to join us in creating a more equitable, knowledgeable and prosperous society.
